LEADING AUSTRALASIAN ACCOUNTING FIRMS TO USE ONE NAME

From 21st April, the Australasian members of the international MGI association will all be known as “MGI”. Although now known as MGI each firm will still continue to be independently owned and managed. These firms in Australia and New Zealand will also be the first to adopt MGI’s new branding and corporate identity.

MGI is an international association of over 200 independently owned accounting, auditing and consulting firms in 75 countries. In Australasia, MGI consists of 10 firms located in key commercial centres in Australia and New Zealand specialising in providing accounting, tax and business solutions to SME clients.

The group has well over 2,000 SME clients in Australia and New Zealand.

“The change of name represents the start of a new era for MGI in Australasia,” said Mr Mal Di Giulio, the MGI Australasia Chairman.

“The strengthening of the Australasian alliance with MGI internationally means we are well positioned to service our clients’ expanding business interests into India, China, Indonesia and Malaysia. Other emerging economies such as the Middle East and Brazil and the former Eastern Bloc are also covered by MGI. The MGI association allows us to provide locally tailored and relevant business advice for our clients getting involved in these increasingly important markets.

“The new corporate branding is also significant as it is designed to reflect the global culture of the MGI business.

The MGI Australasian association was established in 1984 and comprises the following firms:
